Synopsis

Newlywild takes two newlywed couples into a remote and unforgiving location in the wilderness to see if they can survive in order to win a life-changing prize.

Still dressed in their wedding attire and with three wedding gifts of their choice to hopefully help them, they must endure ten days in order to win and receive a prize that will jump start their future together.

As partners, they will share the burden of surviving against the odds in a remote and unforgiving wilderness.

These couples have just made the ultimate commitment to one another, but when pushed to their limits, can they prove that they can really survive anything?

Key Selling Points

- Shows the reality of marriage but in a much harsher environment, with a bit of rustic romance thrown in along the way.
- The two couples do not interact throughout the ten days and have no idea how the others are progressing. The viewers have full visibility and can watch as they both strive for the prize.
- This isn't another show about eating bugs and the "usual" jungle challenges.
- Casting is not limited to experts, former commandos or survival experts.
- As the days progress, the audience gets to see the couples as they find clean water, catch their own food, build shelter and fire – which couples succeed and work as a team? Which couples are successfully Newlywild?
